

Round the back

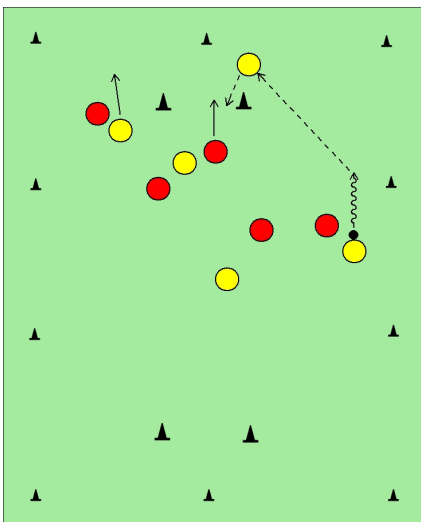

How it works

Red and yellow teams play a 5 v 5 game within the playing area.

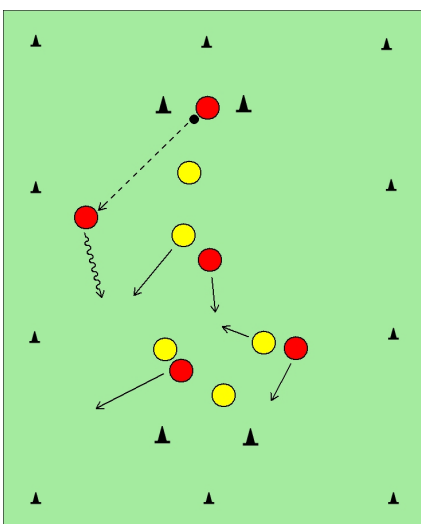

Normal game rules apply as the two teams try to score.

However, the goal is not at each end of the playing area but at least five metres in from the end.

Teams combine to try and create scoring opportunities.

The big difference, however, is that players are allowed 'round the back' of the goals and can also score from that side.

The yellow team has scored a goal from the back so the red team now start possession with a pass from that goal as soon as they are ready to do so.

Possible changes

Players are allowed 'round the back' of the goal but can't score from that side.
