

Four grid passing

How it works

Start with one player in each of the four grids.

One player starts with a ball and can pass to any other player in the four grids. Each player has one touch to control the ball and must then try to pass to another player with their next touch.

Challenge the group to keep going for 1/2 minutes without an error.

This time the players must make a run around the cone at the outside corner of their grid before being available for another pass.

Challenge the group to keep going for 1/2 minutes without an error.

Players could be asked to make a run around the central cone before being available for another pass.

Possible changes

Players follow their pass by making a run into the same grid.

First touch passing only.